Village School Teachers.
The school committee elected the village teachers at a meeting, Saturday, 12th:
High school: Principal—Chas. B. Thompson. Sub-Master—Perceval E. Hathaway. Assistant—Grace B. Bicknell. North grade—Agnes E. Sanborn. Eighth—Elnora Brown. Seventh—Annie S. Emery. Sixth—Grace L. Smith. Fifth—Lucy M. Hayes. Fourth—Coralee B. Cragin. Third—Barbara M. Meritt. Second—Hesterie O. Gardner. Lower—Sadie E. Meritt.

The new principal is the product of the thorough Massachusetts schools. His common and high school courses were taken at his home in Attleboro, Mass., when each school year of the 12 was a full year. His college is Amherst where he was graduated in 1903 with honors in general scholarship.
Mr. Thompson is a self-reliant, energetic young man of twenty-three years. He secured his college education largely on his own resources, being absent from college one year, earning the funds to complete his course.
In high school and college he stood among the very first in scholarship, was active in athletics and the Christian life of the school communities. He is a member of the M. E. church and, last year taught in the Fessenden School for Boys at West Newton, Mass.

Popular with his mates, Mr. Thompson is first of all a student, highly prized by his former principal, Mr. Fessenden, and determined to make a success of his school here, which he considers the beginning of his life work.
Willie Legere has returned from Lynn Mass.
First-class steer beef at Pledges'—no rise in price.
H. H. Hosmer spent Sunday at home from Auburn.
Lee M. Smith and family are on a vacation trip to Newry.
C. B. Cummings & Sons lost a valuable horse Friday night.

VOLUME XXXV

ENTRANCE TO OXFORD COUNTY FAIR GROUNDS.

Where will be the ball game next Saturday afternoon, other ball games through the season, and the Great County Fair, Sept. 13, 14 and 15th.

Norway and Paris Razor-Buyers' Association.

A slick fellow and a good talker entertained a crowd of people around a wagon just off Main street last Friday evening. He told them good stories, borrowed money of them and bestowed presents.

Fragrant-smelling Chinese beans he sold for a quarter, and then cut the price to 15 cts. and finally delivered two for a quarter. They were unheard of bargains. He gave away a few bars of soap and made many of his hearers believe he was soon to scatter broadcast, gold watches.

He was to have plenty of soap and watches the next evening, and whoever used him liberally would get the like dealt out to him with a lavish hand. He asked the people "to be liberal with him and he'd be liberal with them," and he made many really believe it.

He dropped into selling razors at a dollar apiece, and requested his buyers to stay close to him so they would not be overlooked in the final, closing scenes.

The buyers were happy faces and expectant countenances, and some had two, three, and even four razors in their hands, and they really expected to see a shower of cart-wheel dollars rain down upon them instead of the gentle rain drops. This caused "the liberal" man to vanish, taking with him some sixty hard earned plunkets from his confiding audience.

Of course he'd return the next night, and come the much talked of liberal act to them. They had been liberal with him. Why shouldn't he do as he said? "Of course he would," was the reply of the knowing ones.

Saturday and Monday night have passed and he has not appeared, we give a partial list of the buyers so he can send them the expected presents by mail.

Somehow it leaked out that we had a list of the razor-buyers. A delegation from their Association composed of many good citizens and some prominent financiers waited on us and told us what we might expect at their hands if we printed their names—it would be very unpleasant for us, hence we refrain from carrying out our original intention, and can only show you the list upon application at this office.

Norway has 27 members—South Paris 32 members.

Base Ball Association.

A base ball association was formed Monday evening, by several of the local ball enthusiasts. The object is to put on a business basis the running of the ball games and give better service to the public, thus deserving the support of the people and undoubtedly winning it.

The officers are:
Manager—F. Taylor.
Directors—P. H. Nevers, E. G. Feit.
Sec. Treas.—H. B. Young.

The Redcliffe play Oxford 2:30 Saturday afternoon. Strengthened at several points the home team will play to win Saturday, and a great game is safely promised.

One of the best open air concerts ever given in town was put on by Norway Band 1 Tuesday evening, and was greatly appreciated. They had several new pieces and played them well.
A Tabard Inn Station of 125 books where all Tabard Inn books can be exchanged is located at the pharmacy of F. A. Shurtleff & Co., South Paris. We believe it is at present the only one in this vicinity.

Norway Municipal Court.

Wednesday morning Deputy Sheriff Thad Cross had Joe Lerary before the court for intoxication. He went back to jail in default of payment of a $5 fine and costs of $14.

Something of a Birch Deal.

H. B. Foster of this town, L. E. and B. G. McIntire of Waterford, have recently leased of the Berlin Mills Company what standing birch there is in township No. 6, which is located in Franklin county.

The nearest railroad station is Byron, on the Rumford Falls & Rangeley road, five and one-half miles distance. There are many thousands of cords of nice quality white birch on the tract. It is expected to take from 7 to 10 years to clear it.

Associated with Messrs. McIntire Bros. & Foster are Calvin and George Kneeland of Norway, who are practiced mill men, and who have had large experience in operating.

They will commence building the mill at once and expect to get it running as soon as possible. They are in hopes to handle from two to three thousand cords of birch per year. They intend saving strips, only.

Congregational Children's Day.

Children's day was appropriately observed at the Congregational church, last Sunday. The pastor gave a sermon on the formation of habit. A thought retained results in an act, an act repeated becomes a habit, habit form character.

The pastor introduced a boy during the sermon, and by way of illustration tied the boy with a thread, then with two strands of thread, then with three strands, then with a single string and again with a string of two strands. All were broken by the boy. Finally the boy was tied with a cord winding it round and round him. Then came a small rope and at last a chain looking it with a padlock. The application was made as the pastor proceeded.

Singing by the children and a few recitations and exercises took the place of the regular opening of the Sunday school, the large audience of the morning service remaining to this exercise.

Rev. E. A. Tuck, missionary under the Maine Missionary Society of Congregational churches, is laboring in the Magalloway region during the summer, and among the camps of the lumbermen during the winter. He will give an address at the Congregational church Sunday evening at 7 o'clock. This work is the same one carried on by the late Rev. S. York. Three church edifices have been built and dedicated within a year in this region, the outcome of Oxford conference of Congregational churches in connection with the Maine Missionary Society.

Sunday about noon, Charles F. son of Supt. C. P. Barnes, fell from a tree a distance of three feet and broke both bones of the left forearm. The little fellow is improving nicely.

Healed in a Night.

The Methodist church was filled Sunday evening with people who came to hear Rev. C. A. Brooks tell of his experience divine healing. This experience was to say the least remarkable, and would indicate that the age of miracles is not past. In the fall of 1891, Mr. Brooks was engaged in a lucrative business. A few years prior he had experienced conversion and had received a call to preach. This call he had neglected, or rather had put off obedience. He had met with success in religious work, but had determined to continue in business, refusing a license to preach. Immediately following this, a serious accident happened to him.

He resided in Bryant's Pond at the time, Oct. 27, while driving, his horse was frightened, he was thrown out and struck a stone with his shoulder and face. His jaw was broken and his spine injured. Physicians were summoned, but they considered the injury incurable. For a month he continued in a helpless condition, growing weaker and with every prospect of death. About midnight before Thanksgiving, he finally and irrevocably decided to do God's will if he could only get well.

He says that almost immediately the room was filled with a brilliant light, a strange sensation was his and he was conscious of an immediate cure. He called for and ate considerable solid food and was as well as ever in his life.

Dennis Pike is having his house re-shingled.
Marguerite Finney visited last week her cousins, W. H. Stevens and wife, in Portland.

The W. C. T. U. will meet at the home of Mrs. E. F. Bicknell, Thursday evening, July 28.

WOMEN'S WOES.

Hard for any woman to do housework—attend to daily duties with a constantly aching back. Every woman should learn the cause of backache and the cure.

Doan's Kidney Pills

relieve a bad back and cure it—cure every kidney and bladder disorder, from backache to diabetes.

Mrs. C. F. Goodnow, living at 143 Washington street, New Britain, Conn., says: "I gave a testimonial in December, 1898, touching the merits of Doan's Kidney Pills, and in the statement said that I had been bothered with my back and kidneys for over thirteen years, not constantly, but when I caught cold it generally settled in my back, making it lame and sore. Often the pain through the small of my back was so severe as to make me cry out. I read about Doan's Kidney Pills, and procured some from E. W. Thompson & Co.'s drug store, on Main street. They helped my back immediately, and in a short time relieved me of the trouble. I have taken Doan's Kidney Pills at intervals during the last five years, when I felt an attack of backache coming on, and they always brought instant relief. I am never without them in the house."

HEARTS COURAGEOUS

Copyright, 1902, by The Bowen-Merrill Company

Gallop and gallop; she heard the red clouds patter on the road behind as she went. One mile—two miles. The wind-warped trees stretched by in a whirling, drunken race of foliaged dervishes. Three miles—they must surely know by now.

She passed two riders and noted their glance of wonder. One called out to her, but she did not stop. The terrific pace made her breath come jaggedly, and it was only by a supreme effort that she kept her seat on the pommel-less saddle.

The last two miles flung away in a dullest red roar.

There were groups upon the court-house steps when she pulled up her frothing horse, and Henry himself pushed forward to her side.

"Tarleton," she panted, "at Castle Hill—coming to take the assembly!"

Henry turned and repeated the message. It was caught up on all sides and banded up and down the corridors. There was a rush for the sheds and hurried mounting. Then another cry spread: Jefferson—he was at Monticello!

"How much time?" asked Henry briefly of Anne.

"Ten minutes," she answered at hazard.

"Too little. They will be upon him before this," he brought his horse and vaulted into the saddle. "Will Tarleton know you have come?"

"Yes."

"Then you must not stay," he said firmly. "You shall ride with me."

Before she could answer a horseman came clattering in from a bridle path. It was Colonel Carter, and he took in the preparations at a glance.

"Good!" he shouted. "Lose no time, gentlemen. Captain Jouett has warned Monticello. The assembly stands dissolved, to meet at Staunton three days hence."

About noon hoofs rang behind them in the flinty road, and Henry and Anne reined their horses into the brush. Two more riders galloped by, to wheed and come back at Henry's halloo. They were Mr. John Tyler and Colonel Harrison. Fatigued and hungry as they were, both essayed to smile.

"Is Jefferson safe?" cried Henry.

"Aye," Colonel Harrison assured him. "The family are gone to Colonel Carter's, and all of the gentlemen who were at Monticello are in the mountains. 'Twas a narrow squeak."

"Whether think you we had best ride?" Colonel Harrison asked as they started.

"Lafayette is nigh the Rapid-Ann," said Henry. "I faith—with a smile at the girl beside him—the man who named it should have seen you ride! Best to reach our own lines for the night, and tomorrow we will off for Staunton. Ely's house should be near our troops, and Mistress Tillotson can get safe escort to Fredericksburg."

At mid-afternoon they stopped at a small hut in a gorge and asked for something to eat.

After the meal and rest the four rode some hours through shaggy ravines strewn with wrack of storm, where the green vines of every growing thing ran lush with frenzied sap, then to the low valleys of the Rapid-Ann. And here at last spirals of smoke showed them where Lafayette lay encamped, waiting a junction with Wayne to march against Cornwallis.

The first challenge they met came from a detachment of Virginia riflemen, and, finding an old friend in their commander, Major Call, Colonel Harrison and Mr. Tyler elected to go no farther. Ely's house, Henry learned, was but a few miles beyond the picket lines, and as to the morning's escort for Anne the major sent a lieutenant with them a mile down the river to headquarters to ask it.

It was a picturesque encampment through which they passed. There were few tents—mere wigwags of fresh cut boughs to shed the dew. Here and there fires of blazing fence rails glowed yellowly in the gathering twilight.

The tent of the acting colonel of the Virginia Continental regiment was pitched apart on a patch of beaten grass. Stools and a light folding table holding pen and paper sat just outside the open flaps, from whose angle a lantern hung, already winking in the dusk.

Benching were on one side, and here, while their horses were cared for, Henry and Anne seated themselves to wait. Near by the dusty silver of a cannon swayed against the shrouded summation of the sky, and from the distance through the warm evening came the hum of the camp, noises of mess preparing and the tramp and neigh of horses.

They sat awhile silent, Anne's every nerve tired. Henry watched her. How softly white her cheeks, how deep the longing in her eyes!

"'Twas a quick plan and a splendid ride," he said at length. "A brave act, as are all of yours!"

She cringed suddenly. "I hate that word so!" she implored, and he knew of what she was thinking.

All at once she looked at him, speaking earnestly: "Do you believe I shall ever see him? Oh, if he could but know—but know that I was not false to him in my heart! At first I thought I would be content to know he was alive, even if I never saw him again—if he hated me! But now—now, I would give my life to hear him say that he forgave me!"

It was as if all the pent up longing of the past time burst out in a flood. Her voice had sunk very low with the last words, for the lieutenant had approached again.

A horse pulled up before the tent, and its rider dismounted. He wore the uniform of a colonel of the line, and even in the half light both the watchers saw how strangely pallid his clean-cut features showed beneath the straight black spruce he wore.

An orderly sprang from the tent to lead away the dancing horse, and the lieutenant saluted.

"A gentleman to see you, colonel. He requests escort tonight for a lady to Ely's and tomorrow, to Fredericksburg."

The colonel had seated himself at a table and was spreading out a parchment map in the glow of the lantern. "Where are they?"

"They are here, sir."

As they came forward into the light the seated figure settled back in the shadow and shaded his eyes with his hand. The lieutenant saluted and withdrew a little distance.

When the colonel spoke, it was in a muffled voice. "Your name, sir?"

Henry told him.

"For what lady do you wish this escort?" The black peruke was bent over the table. The quill was scratching.

"For this lady."

Anne had been staring, breathless, fascinated, her eyes fixed in a humid pain. She took a step nearer, stretching out her arms, her lips trembling to a sob.

"Louis!" Her breath clung about the name. Henry swallowed an exclamation.

At the whisper the head lifted, and Armand's deep eyes looked at them out of a granite pale face. They went past her as if she had been the air and rested again on Henry.

"Her name?" he asked with an effort.

Anne drew back as if from a tangible blow. She flushed, and her eyes iced with a glint of the old, undying pride. She drew herself up and answered for Henry.

"Anne Tillotson," she said. But in spite of herself a throb of pain beat through the clear words.

A moment's silence, through which the pen wrote slowly. Then Armand rose unsteadily as the lieutenant came forward and thrust the order he had written into his hand.

"Conduct them," he said in a choked voice, and with his salute the tent flaps fell behind him.

"I warrant you found Colonel Armand a brusque cavalier," said the lieutenant as they pounced out of camp. "He is somewhat of a mystery, they say. No one knows where he came from. He joined the army in '77, and Washington took him up because he taught the militia brigades the drill like a French guardsman. He was at Valley Forge, too, and in New Jersey under Lafayette. He enlisted a legion of his own. It was cut to pieces at Camden. He's young, too, but he fights like Mad Anthony Wayne."

Anne had no reply to make. In the darkness she leaned her head to her horse's mane and wept with a rage of tears.

"He is fighting for us," she told herself, over and over with a thrill, and ended it as often with a mental wail.

"But he will never forgive me—never—never—never!"

CHAPTER XVII.
HENRY contrived to send early news of Anne's safety to Castle Hill, so that when she returned there she found the household undisturbed.

The sound of war had moved eastward down the peninsula. Lafayette, the "boy," who the British commander wrote could not escape him, without sufficient men to meet his adversary went playing chase the fox. He hung on Cornwallis's flanks, covering the American stores, anticipated his moves, harassed him, worried him with a thousand pin pricks. In return Tarleton and Simcoe played their wanton mischief, slaughtered the cattle, cut the throats of the young horses, destroyed the growing corn and tobacco and burned the barns. The path of the British front remained a trail of ruin and desolation.

Anne's sight of Armand at the river camp had seared her heart with a wish to be less far from him. She dreamed of battlefields on which he lay dying, and she still misunderstood, still unforgotten.

Letters meantime came from Betsy Byrd. Her father had been falling in health, was taking no part in the struggle, and so far Westover had been in no way molested. Francis was a captain in Weedon's regiment.

"Only think, dear," wrote Betsy, "'tis the same old man who kept the tavern at Fredericksburg. To think of Frank serving under him!" An unconscious indication of the maternal leanings.

If other were needed, it was easily to be found. General Arnold had stopped for dinner on his raid upon Richmond, and Cornwallis had crossed the river at Westover and had been entertained. Pages were devoted to a description of Tarleton, over whom Betsy went into raptures.

Spurred by her craving for nearer news of the armies that reached Charlottesville, Anne answered in person the invitation the letters held, rode to Richmond with Henry when he returned from the assembly at Staunton, and from Richmond came in two hours' ride to Westover.

The war had touched Mrs. Byrd lightly. She was as handsome and as peppy as ever and exhibited a certainty of British plans which Anne had occasion to remember later when there were no gentle whispers of investigation the self-satisfied lady's conduct. She treated the visitor, however, on this occasion with consideration and refrained from using the word "rebel" oftener than she deemed necessary. Nor did she gibe at Francis's commission in the Continental army.

A week spent at Westover, the Byrd pinnace took Anne down the river to Burwell's, a proceeding at which Mrs. Byrd feebly protested, as the place was within a half dozen miles of Williamsburg, now the center of activity of both armies. But Anne reminded her that Colonel Tillotson was with Governor Nelson's militia in the neighborhood and would not be dissuaded.

The first hours of her arrival at Burwell's were gilded by two bits of news—one that her uncle was daily expected there, the other that Gladden Hall was as yet undisturbed.

But this latter gleam was soon to be clouded. Mammy Evaline appeared the morning after Anne's arrival, half crazed with grief and fear that was not assuaged by the unexpected sight of her mistress.

She threw herself in a quivering heap and clasped Anne's feet.

"'Lor' bress yo', honey!" she sobbed. "Dee come at las'! Co'wallis done ransack Gladden Hall las' night, en he sojers kyar'd meh po' boy erway wid 'em. Whut's we ter do, honey? Dee's dar now. Yo' reck'n dee done kilt him yit?"

An hour later Anne took the York-ton highroad, mounted on the least tempting of the horses the Burwells kept hidden in the woods. Opposite Williamsburg she climbed a knoll, but

Two of them seized his bridle.

Should see little sign of life in its deserted streets. Small wonder, for Cornwallis was only a handful of miles away. Here she turned to her left into an unused bridle path leading by a short cut to Gladden Hall.

She went boldly enough, with many self assurances, and so, a bare half mile from the gates, rode full tilt upon a group of British soldiery resting in the shade.

They sprang to their feet as her horse went back upon his haunches, and two of them seized his bridle, but dropped it at a word from an officer. The latter came forward.

"Your pardon, mistress," he said courteously, but firmly. "You cannot pass farther in this direction."

"Why not?" she asked calmly. "'Tis the first time I was ever denied entrance to my own home."

He bowed now, with hat in his hand. "General Cornwallis occupies the house at present as his own quarters."

"I know it. I have personal business with his lordship."

"In that case," he responded, "you may pass. I shall take pleasure in escorting you. I am one of the general's aids."

He mounted, and they rode in silence to the gates. Here and there a picket stepped from the roadside, but saluted as he saw her guide.

The aid stood aside as she entered the hall. Through the half open door of the drawing room she saw braided uniforms grouped about a table from which floated out the sound of laughter and the clink and tinkle of glasses, filled from the cellars.

"And they tell me," rolled a full voice, with a bantering chord in it, "that you would have snared the lot of them at Charlottesville were it not for a girl. Fie, colonel! A dragoon should have a sterner heart! Come, now, make a clean breast of it. Who was the light heeled damsel?"

"Miss Tillotson of Gladden Hall," Anne went red at the door.

Anne went red and white at this contretemps, and Tarleton sprang up with such an exclamation that Lord Cornwallis, who had risen also, looked astonishment from one to the other. Then the commander caught the situation and laughed, as did the whole company.

The merriment sent resentment to Anne's face, and the general sobered to courteous contrition.

"You bear easy honors, mistress," he said, "therefore overlook our hilarity, which, I do protest, was yet ill timed in the pain which the hard usage of such a noble mansion must bring. I regret," he added, "that such things must be. War is not a tender game, and beauty must suffer with the rest."

"You mistake," she told him quickly. "I come not to complain, but to ask a favor. A negro was taken on this property and is now held by your men. He has been my own body servant all my life. Surely you cannot lack for servants. I ask you now to give him back to me."

A Fair Offer Made by Noyes Drug Store to All Suffering From Catarrh.

Noyes Drug Store is selling Hyomei on a plan that has caused considerable talk among their customers.

The plan is different from that followed by other remedies, but the remedy itself is different also. This treatment for the cure of catarrh has such an unusual record of cures to its credit that they offer to refund the money if it does not give the desired benefit. This is certainly one of the fairest offers that can be made, and anyone who has catarrh and does not take advantage of it is doing himself or herself an injustice.

Do not suffer any longer with tickling, smarting, burning, eye-watering troubles that afflict those who have catarrh. Hyomei will cure you, but if you should not find it adapted to your case, Noyes Drug Store will return your money.

PREVENTS HAY FEVER.

All who are subject to hay fever or rose colds should use Hyomei daily for two or three weeks before the time of their annual attack, and thus prevent it. The worst cases are quickly relieved and cured by Hyomei and Hyomei Balm.

Hearts Courageous.

"It's the nigger named John the Baptist, I presume, sir," suggested one of the officers. "Colonel Dundas has him."

Cornwallis bowed, with an easy, good humored smile on his big, confident, masterful face. "We who enjoy the hospitality of this mansion can scarce refuse so light a favor to her who, under happier circumstances, should be our hostess. You shall have your body servant, mistress."

"I thank your lordship," said Anne, with dignity.

Seating himself, Cornwallis wrote a hasty line, folded the paper and handed it to her.

"Colonel Dundas' brigade lies with Simcoe at Spencer's ordinary on the Williamsburg road," he said. "He will give you return passes."

The officers rose as she swept a few courtesy from the threshold. The aid held her stirrup with deference, and she entered down through the gates and took the west road with a joyfully beating heart and the written order in the pocket of her gown.

But she did not finish the journey. She had feared scarce half the way when a far popping came from the distance. The next hill showed puffs of smoke hanging above the trees, and she knew that the sound was the rattle of engaging musketry. Could her eye have pierced beneath that foliage she would have seen the first skirmish of Lafayette's campaign, the brilliant charge of McPherson's dragoons upon Simcoe's rangers.

She had pulled up, startled at the sound, when a low but familiar voice called her from the thicket.

"John the Baptist!" she cried.

"Yes, Miss Anne, it's me," he responded, with a moist grin, parting the bushes. "I warn' gwinter curry no Britisher hosses long! 'Twarn' no use'n 'em wallop'n' me—me hide's tougher'n white leather."

"They let you go?"

He threw back his head like a bay-ling hound and laughed loosely.

"Norm! Dem squinch eyed scoun'ls nudder let nuttin' go. I kep' meh eyes skunt, en tuk ter de bresh dis vey maw'nin' slicker'n er weasel. Greased lightnin' couldn't ketch mel! What y' doin' heah, Miss' Anne? Whar y' been?"

"At Burwell's."

"Yo' jes' ride lickety cut down dar ergain. Dat's de bes' place. 'Speck Mars' John be down dar 'reckly."

For a fortnight Burwell's heard the grind and rush of the armies so near. At length this lull. Cornwallis had withdrawn sullenly into Yorktown.

Then in early September a momentous message flew from lip to lip. Washington was coming! The wary commander in chief, pretending plans against New York, had led Sir Henry Clinton to recede and then, turning front, the Chesapeake and then, turning front, had marched with speed for Virginia, where Cornwallis lay with all his army in the elbow of the bay, leisurely fortifying.

Back of this swift march of 400 miles lay vital tidings. A new French fleet was on its way to the Chesapeake. Lafayette drew his troops between the British and a retreat into the Carolinas. The patriot army was hastening down upon them from the north. Would Clinton scent danger and send ships to snatch Cornwallis from the closing jaws, or would the French fleet come in time to block the sea way out?

But Virginia knew nothing of this at first. She only knew that Washington was coming.

One night Anne was awakened to an unusual sight. Out on the jasper colored river came a succession of huge barges, and from them, above the plash of oars and creak of oarage, rose the hum of a multitude. She leaned far from the window to listen. How like phantom shadows the bristling floats swept past! "What can it be?" she cried.

"'Tis the French, come in the fleet of De Grasse," said Mr. Burwell. "It must now be at anchor in Hampton Roads. Thank God! Thank God!"

There was a thrill of rejoicing in his tone, but Anne's heart beat painfully. Hope and help were come to her hand—to Virginia the beautiful, the tragic, the tender. The first promise of this help had come to it when strong arm called to counsel and counsel to strong arm and both feared to answer. And he who bore that message? Denied by her lips that called to him, dishonored by her hand that ached for a touch of him, what thought now had his heart for her?

The dark shapes passed on to the north of Jamestown island that night and disappeared an army. Silently they fled up Archer's Hope creek and drew, with Lafayette's troops, the fatal crowd about Yorktown.

The fleet that brought them lay in the river mouth below, and when the British ships which Cornwallis had been promised here to that same day, with fourteen hundred guns, De Grasse's watchful frigates battered them away.

The would-be rescuers sailed back, and Cornwallis woke to find himself entrapped.

On the day Washington's allied armies marched into Williamsburg, Anne stood with Colonel Tilton on the steps of the capitol to see them pass. The Continentals were ragged, worn with painful marches in heat and rain, with stained faces covering old wounds, but with the unquenchable resolve in their faces. Rochambeau's French were uniformed in white, with carrying gold facings, eager, debonair, carrying gold wrought standards that caught the sun. Anne watched through smarting eyes. Somewhere, waiting there, among those other troops lying panting against the hills nearer Yorktown, was the one face which meant the whole war—the whole world—to her.

Steadily, under the enemy's fire, batteries rose along of these rode Knox one to another of these, his round, jovial placing his gunners, his round, jovial face creased in smiles, in his element at last. And these gunners for five days, from sunrise to sunset, hurled iron and flame upon the defenses.

The inner parallels crept toward the river bank, tightening the line. Here their advance was stayed by a redoubt on the high bank, thirty feet above the river. It had resisted all the force of the gunners.

"If we take that redoubt," said Washington to Knox on the afternoon of the fifth day of the bombardment, "Cornwallis must surrender."

Colonel Armand, with a handful of his troops, reconnoitered that afternoon on the right, came near the river and in advance of the foremost American battery. From the redoubts far to the left came a scattering whistle of grape and now and then the grinding belch of a cannonade. The air was full of the heavy, pungent smell of burned powder and the reeking scent of fresh turned earth.

His gaze had sought the wide river for a moment and turned up the stream with a look that was fixed and far away.

"A prisoner, coming from the town, captured under the river bank, sir."

The voice recalled him. "Bring him here."

The man brought before him looked with a start, then smiled with a gleam of mockery on his ruddy lips. Armand's face was immovable.

"Still the same, colonel," the newcomer flouted, with a glance at the other's uniform. "Still Captain Jarrat. My Philadelphia wound, as you see, proved not so bad. I am on my way now out of the precious rat trap vander I have small liking for these peculiar delays. Suppose you scribble me a pass through the lines?"

"Sergeant," said Armand, "take this man to the trench and give him ten minutes to go back to his own redoubts."

A swarthy red came to Jarrat's face. "I would speak with you alone a moment. I have a communication to make."

At Armand's nod the others fell back. "What is your communication?" he asked sternly.

"You have covered your past very well, but I know you. Do you remember that day at the congress? Well, I am not dumb. Now, will you let me go?"

For answer Armand recalled his sergeant. "Give this man ten lashes," he commanded, "before you start him from the trench."

Jarrat leaped back, snarling like a fox at bay. "You would dare?"

"Aye," said Armand slowly. "One for each stroke you gave the bondwoman at Gladden Hall."

The prisoner multiplied imprecations as they prepared his punishment, but took the blows in stony silence. Then he walked to the trench, tied a kerchief about his arm and, shaking his fist with a last livid curse at his captor, fled toward the fortifications.

That evening General Moses Hazen sat in his tent, the headquarters nearest the firing line on the right rear of the investing trenches, reading a closely written note. The handwriting, though unfamiliar to him, was that of Captain Jarrat. As he read and reread it, lines of perplexity came into his strong Canadian face.

"How was this brought?" he asked his orderly.

"With a dispatch flag from the eastern redoubt, sir," was the answer.

He was still perusing it when the orderly entered the tent to announce Colonel Armand. The general swore softly, crumpled the letter in his hand, hesitated, then nodded assent. His eyes were sharp gray, inset, and they fixed themselves intently on the officer as he entered.

"I am informed, General Hazen," said Armand, saluting, "that you have in charge the makeup of a column which will storm the enemy's tenth redoubt tonight."

"Yes."

"I wish to volunteer."

The general's keen eyes looked into Armand's steady ones. Then he rumbled his wig in thought.

"I accept your services," he said at length. "Colonel Alexander Hamilton will be in command. You will report to him at the right of the first parallel at dusk."

As the other passed out the general smoothed open the letter again. "And yet," he said slowly to himself, "Benedict Arnold was also a brave man."

At dusk in the muck-black trenches lay 400 men, compact, wide eyed, waiting the signal for storming. The earth silence was profound, and through it their breathing swelled like a ghostly tide. The hanging sky formed a white arch under which all movements seemed at a distance vague and formless. A spattering of rain was dropping, and fitful jags of lightning knifed the low clouds. From the rear an occasional mortar was groaning, and from time to time a fiery rocket passed with a raucous shrieking overhead—a shot from the British batteries.

Nearest the open lay a little group of twenty. It was the forlorn hope, volunteers all, who were to lead the column. One of these was Colonel Armand.

At the signal the twenty rose as one man and hurried forward on a run. A hundred paces and a challenge rang out; then the parapets opened in spurting gusts of death.

The handful stayed for no sappers, but scaled the abatis, leaped the ditch and rushed upon the works with their spontons. Above them, as they climbed, were hammering oaths, stabbing steel and leaping, thrusting forms.

The first point blank discharge had gone to waste, and Armand, dragging a grenadier headlong down by the shoulders, leaped the wall and cleared a space between two guns with his saber, a space filled a moment after by the rush of the supporting battalion.

The fight became a pandemonium of cries, grapples and yellow flashes. The bleeding shadows swelled instantly full of a vast, red smoke, of yells, of curses.

Festivities Marred.

"The Odd Fellows festivities in opening the new hall Friday night were temporarily marred by Mr. Jerry Carson suffering a severe attack of cramp colic. A bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy was procured from a drug store and Mr. Carson was soon as good as new and the work went on."—Lindsa, Ind. Ter., News. This Remedy is for sale by Noyes Drug Store, Shurtleff's, South and West Paris. 30 33 of men trampled, struggling, grunting, underfoot.

Armand, lunging, turned suddenly upon a snaky form creeping in the shadow of the gun. When seen the man pressed back into the human surge. Armand trailing his panther-like. To the latter's saber he opposed a sword and used it well, but gave way steadily before the fury of Armand's attack, retreating across the space between the rear of the redoubt and the river bank, scarce ten yards in width—an acre now a melee of hand to hand encounters with sword, clubbed musket and bayonet.

"Surrender!" cried Armand.

For answer the other avoided a thrust and twisted to one side, and Armand, with the rush, feeling loose ground crumble under his feet, realized suddenly that he was on the very verge of the high bank.

At the instant a new uproar arose. Through and over the space plunged the third detachment sent to attack the redoubt in reverse.

WILSON'S MILLS.

Wiped Out by Fire.

The farm buildings of E. S. Bennett were burned Saturday noon. The fire started in the barn, and in less than an hour the whole establishment was in ashes. Everything was very dry, and a high wind drove the flames toward the house. A spark of horses and a valuable colt, just broken, were burned, an entire logging outfit of sleds, harnesses, etc. also a camping outfit for sportsmen just completed. Of a well-equipped farm establishment, nothing of value is left.

The guests of Poplar Tavern contributed liberally with fancywork, while their money was as free as water.

DENMARK.

Be Can Wake them Up.

The 75th anniversary of the Congregational church, as previously noted, was a very interesting and profitable season. It closed Tuesday evening, July 5th, with a lecture by Rev. Smith Baker, of Portland, who demonstrated before he got through that he was a pretty thorough Methodist.

He showed what it was to become a child of God by the new birth—a happy experience of pardon, regeneration, adoption, and witness of the spirit, etc. His service was very interesting and profitable, and he got up quite a shout before he got through, and he was glad he had awakened somebody.

Farmers are rushing the haying. Your Scribe passed the 70th milestone last week.

A. H. Witham sold a cow the 13th to Mrs. Jane Gray.

OXFORD.

Playing Winning Ball.

At Bridgeport, Saturday, July 16, the Oxford team defeated the Bridgeport team in their second game by a score of 15 to 2. Cunningham pitched the best for Bridgeport. Capt. Pike's boys had eagle's eyes and battled with demoralizing effect. Adams twirled the ball for Oxford and he pushed it over the plate with telling effect, getting to his credit 11 strike-outs to Cunningham's 2. A good crowd of Bridgeport natives turned out to cheer for their boys. Oxford had a few fans to give them an encouraging remark occasionally. Cunningham had plenty of speed and it was speed the Oxford team wanted.

The Oxford team has played 12 games and won 9 of them giving to their credit 75 per cent. of which no other team in the smaller towns of the State can say. Sunday July 30, the championship game will be played on Norway fair grounds between the Oxford champions of 1903 and West Paris.

HARRISON.

Very Fine Services.

At the F. B. church last Sunday, the quartet was most ably assisted by F. H. Warner, a caller from New York, who is staying in Harrison during the month of July. The congregation enjoyed the rich, smooth tones of his fine cello and appreciate the courtesy toward them most gratefully. His rendition of Handel's Largo was excellent and musical. Such visits to our town are warmly welcomed and enjoyed.

In place of the usual response, F. Wilnot Walker sang a beautiful solo with cello obligato by Mr. Warner, Mrs. Flint presiding at the piano.

This church and pastor are not unaware that they have constantly good music, well rendered, and are thoroughly grateful for the work of their quartet and able organist. Mrs. George Flint is at the organ, and is director; Mrs. Herbert Denison, soprano; Mrs. Frank Bennett, alto; Walter Dudley, tenor; F. Wilnot Walker, basso.

"Sans Reproche."

There once was a man with a centrifugal nose, But he wasn't to blame for that. His friends were outnumbered and hidden by foes, But he wasn't to blame for that. His clothing was ragged, his linen was soiled, To avoid honest work he necessarily toiled, And his eyes looked like onions when they have been boiled, But he wasn't to blame for that. This man had a feeble and vacuous grin, But he wasn't to blame for that. When he tried to look pleasant, his face looked like sin, But he wasn't to blame for that. His courage was broken, his spirit was sad, His wife was a lawbreaker, his children were bad, And he had trouble counting how many he had, But he wasn't to blame for that. It was rumored he looked upon wine that was red, But he wasn't to blame for that. Thus robbing his wife and his children of bread, But he wasn't to blame for that. His manners were wretched, his morals were loose, And of language he oft made a villainous use. He once beat a tailor and ate up his goose, But he wasn't to blame for that. His friends might defend him, they got little thanks, But he wasn't to blame for that. If he'd only had courage he'd have been robbing banks, But he wasn't to blame for that. But he couldn't be made to see politics right, He voted against us, our party was right, So we just took him out, and we hung him one night. And we "wasn't" to blame for that. CORA M. W. GREENLEAF.

Centennial at Gilead.

The town of Gilead, small in comparison with many other towns, yet great in the character and moral earnestness of its citizens who typify those solid characteristics of the land they call home, celebrated in befitting manner one hundred years on Thursday of last week. Sons and daughters of the town since they came back to visit homes, and citizens of neighboring towns in both states came to participate in the exercises.

A parade was formed on the arrival of the 11 o'clock train from Portland. This was led by president R. D. Hastings of the company, and the Gilead cornet band, school children to the number of 75 and a company of men dressed as Indian rangers and armed for business. This was a forcible reminder of the early days when a man's life depended upon his quickness of sight, and skill with the rifle. This town since its settlement has not suffered much from Indian depredations.

On arrival at Hastings' grove it was found that a platform had been built for the speakers, table spread and seats arranged for a dinner. A short time was devoted to sociability, the seats were taken, blessing was pronounced by Rev. L. M. Bosworth, pastor of the Union church. The dinner was a fine one of beans, meats and pastry and as it was partaken of, conversation waxed rapid. Many interesting stories were told of the early days and a full hour passed ere the conclusion of the feast.

At two o'clock a commemorative service was opened by musical selections by the band, prayer by Rev. Mr. Bosworth and an address by the president, R. D. Hastings. After paying tribute to the green, living and dead of whom Gilead has sent forth into the active world her full share, he expressed great regrets because of Judge H. C. Peabody of the Maine Supreme bench, and Prof. John Wright were unable to be present. It was with pleasure he introduced the historical actor, Prof. A. J. Roberts, who holds the chair of rhetoric in Colby college, Waterville, and is a son of Gilead.

Following the address was singing by a quartet of ladies from Gorham who are natives of Gilead. Prof. W. Scott Wright gave a fine solo. The reading of act of incorporation by the general court of Massachusetts was read by H. P. Wheeler, and there were reminiscent remarks by many of the elderly residents and visitors.

The athletic sports were many and viewed with much interest while scores of people visited interesting points of the village including the fine home of J. W. Bennett, who has large lumber interests in the town and whose home is a veritable museum of art and the historic in the town.

The old Peabody house built in 1800, owned by Mrs. Wm. R. Peabody and occupied by her as a summer home was in early days a tavern and used as such until the stage coach passed from the highways. The hotels of Gilead now are modern and excellent and have a large summer patronage of visitors.

In 1772, Oliver and John Peabody, Jr., of Andover, Mass., and John and Samuel Bodwell of Methuen petitioned the General Court of Massachusetts for a grant of land of six miles square lying west of Sudbury Canada, as Bethel was then termed. John Peabody was a veteran of the Ticonderoga and Louisburg campaigns, and the other men probably were in the provisional army, but they asked the land not as a gift for services but to purchase it. The next year the grant was made of about 6000 acres besides nearly 4000 of river and mountain, and the consideration was $250, or about $400, subject to the reservation of 100 acres for the first Protestant minister, 100 acres for the support of the ministry and 100 acres for public school. That is, 15 families settle on the grant within six years.

The lot was called Peabody's Patent. Though the required number of settlers did not move to the land within six years, yet in some way the proprietors held the grant and the next record of the General Court is of the incorporation in 1804.

1872 the suspension or "Wire Bridge" was erected across the Androscoggin. As in all similar towns, gallons of rum were drunk at the expense of the town, at the erection and repairs of the bridge, roads and town hall, but in 1855 the town voted in favor of the prohibitory law.

The question of separation from Massachusetts was before the voters of the district in 1815, 1816 and 1819. In each case Gilead voted in favor of separation. In the time of the Civil War Gilead sent one-third of her voters to the defense of the nation.

The first settled minister was Rev. Henry White called by the town for five years. The pastorate terminated in 1833, and the town called no other pastor in its corporate history. The Congregational church was organized in 1818, and has had preaching, either by its own efforts or in conjunction with Shelburne, nearly all the time. The Maine Missionary society assist in maintaining the services. A Methodist church was maintained several years.

Bowel Complaint in Children.

During the summer months children are subject to disorders of the bowels which should receive careful attention as soon as the first unnatural looseness of the bowels appears. The best remedy in use for bowel complaint is Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy as it promptly controls any unnatural looseness of the bowels, whether it be in a child or an adult. For sale by Noyes Drug Store, Shurtleff's, South and West Paris.

Too Much Law.

There are no other people on earth so addicted to law making as the Americans. Not only is Congress in session a large part of the time, changing the federal statutes, but 45 state legislatures containing thousands of men who think they were born to say their fellow-citizens may not do as every winter laboriously engaged in repealing what predecessors have enacted and substituting therefor new codes which are in turn rejected or amended to suit the notion of new sets of legislators.

"What are we here for if it isn't to make laws?" is the first and most natural inquiry of the congressman and state senator and representative, and to this there is for him no answer which stays him in his preparation of bills to regulate the ingoing and outgoing, the business and the pleasures of his fellow-citizens.

The result is a multiplicity of laws, some sound and some senseless; some well framed and some crude, ambiguous; some workable, some impossible of execution and nearly all uncertain to the average man and woman until they have been interpreted by the courts.

In a recent address at Columbia University Judge Coxe said there are more than 14,000 statutes made annually in the United States and he drew from this fact the reasonable deduction that such an output was not only not needed but was largely responsible for the expensiveness and damaging delays in the administration of justice by the courts.

We have too much law, he said, and much of our legislation is so unstable that the determination of cases that they virtually justify in the parties to the extent unknown in any other country. In all European cases are brought to judgment much more speedily than here, because the law of yesterday is generally the law of today and a decision once reached is not subject to the many attacks which are in practice here to set aside verdicts, secure new trials and postpone in many ways the administration of justice in both civil and criminal cases.

In Germany at present there is a strong movement to reform the practice in the courts because it is often from nine to twelve months after a case is entered on the docket before a final verdict is reached, and in England, and France even, such delay would be regarded intolerable; but here a final decision in that length of time is something exceptional and sudden.

NOTICE OF FORECLOSURE.

Whereas Joseph H. Linscott, of Paris in the county of Oxford and State of Maine, by his mortgage deed, dated the seventh day of November, A. D. 1898, and recorded with Oxford registry of deeds, book 235, page 104, conveyed to the late Solomon L. Millet, a certain parcel of land with the buildings thereon situated in Paris Village, bounded and described as follows: being a triangular piece of land near the Railway crossing, bounded Northerly by the Norway Branch Railroad, Southerly by the highway leading from Norway to South Paris and Westerly by land owned by said Linscott to L. M. Cox. Also one other piece or parcel of land situated in said Paris, and being the same the conveyance of which was made by W. Frost by warranty deed dated March sixteenth A. D. 1895, and recorded with Oxford registry of deeds book 234, page 461. Excepting and reserving a small piece sold to Samuel W. Benson, and whereas the condition of said mortgage has been broken, not having been paid to the said Solomon L. Millet, in his lifetime nor to the subscriber since his decease, now therefore, by reason of the breach of the condition thereof I claim a foreclosure of said mortgage.

WEST FRYEBURG.

Stirling Literary Club.
Tuesday, July 12, the regular meeting of the Stirling Literary Club met and after the brief time devoted to routine matters, the program, which included a sketch of the life of Oliver Wendell Holmes and selections from his works, was enthusiastically rendered, all taking part. Following the literary exercises the hostess, Mrs. H. D. E. Hutholms, served delicious cake and ice cream. The topic for the program for the next meeting is Robert Burns. The meeting will be at Mrs. D. B. Hill's, July 26.

J. A. Jones and family are enjoying camping at Kezar in their new cottage. Summer guests are arriving and expected shortly. Mrs. Henry Andrews has three guests with more to follow.

Joseph Johnson of Fryeburg is doing carpenter work at the Benj. M. Hill house in South Chatham, N. H., and boards at George H. Hill's.

A party of young people of South Chatham, N. H., made up an excursion to Hurricane mountain last week and found raspberries ripe and plenty.

A great deal of hay is being cut and there is no complaint of poor hay weather. "Too good," one hay maker was heard to remark, the other day. But sooner or later, rain is sure to come.

L. A. Stevens joined his family here for a couple of days.

The hot weather starts many visitors and boarders into the country.

Leon McIntire of Kearsarge, N. H., was a guest at Frank L. Eastman's last Sunday.

Joseph Andrews of South Dakota is visiting his sister, Mrs. S. F. Ballard, also other relatives.

Lura Dinsmore from Jackson, N. H., who was at Mrs. A. S. Farrington's a part of last summer, has been a guest there the past week.

Mrs. L. A. Stevens of Portland is a guest at her parental home, Henry Andrews'. Mrs. Andrews has three boarders and more coming.

Mrs. C. M. Eaton and daughter Minnie from Boston arrived at Mrs. Eaton's brother's, T. J. Bragdon's, Saturday evening, for a short vacation.

Blueberries have been very plenty in the vicinity of the burnt district near Jockey Cap, and a large quantity have been secured by many from various places.

Mrs. Sarah Wiley and daughter Lucia are at Mrs. Shuah Lewis'. Lucia is in quite poor health, but her relatives hope the change from Peabody, Mass., to East Fryeburg will prove beneficial to her. Pine woods will prove beneficial to her.

Mrs. Osborne Fernald and little daughter from Jackson, N. H., were guests at F. H. Meserve's last Sunday. Mrs. Geo. H. Coleman from Dorchester, Mass., came to their summer home here, July 15. Mr. Coleman will join his family later.

WEST BETHEL.

Women Haymakers.
Florence Skillings and Ethel Hammons each have recently closed a term of school and are now spending their vacation at their parental home at Rufus Skillings.

On account of the hired man being away they assisted in getting five large two horse loads of hay in one day, loading it on the rack as Mr. Skillings pitched on, and also raked after the cart and stowed away the hay in the barn as it was thrown up to them, which we think a good day's work for two schoolteachers and a great help to Mr. Skillings.

John Rollins has been sick for a few days.

There are a few boarders at Maple Lane house.

Mrs. H. B. Lowell is picking berries. She got $1.42 for one day's work.

J. E. Pike and Mrs. L. E. Allen are being visited by their brother.

Mr. O'Reilly and wife, who have been away on a vacation will be at home this week.

Mary M. Bell has gone to Gorham, N. H., to visit her daughter, Mrs. W. W. Goodridge.

Mrs. DeForest Connor with her daughter and granddaughter from the Bog were in this village last Tuesday.

WEST PORTER.

A True Saying.
If a person attends strictly to his own business he will have very little time to meddle with affairs of anybody else, and if he stays at home on Sunday where he belongs, there is very little danger of his being in any way disturbed by what other people may do.

S. P. Fox is gaining slowly.

Wm. T. Sawyer remains about the same.

Lewis Thompson is at L. E. Norton's at work haying, this week.

Horace Day closed up his high ground hay on the Sawyer place, Saturday.

Harry, Pearl, and Charles Cole and his wife attended the grange at Kezar Falls, Saturday night.

J. Cummings is working this week for Mr. Stewart with his horses and machine, haying in Freedom, N. H.

Rev. Wm. H. Cotton of Waterford, was at the Center schoolhouse Sunday evening. The house was well filled.

The old saying is, when loons holler it is a sure sign of rain. I think we must have it soon. They have been out this week, plenty.

George Quint of Brownfield passed through our town this week with a nice pair of horses that he purchased of L. B. Merrill of North Parsonsfield.

Rain is much needed again, as the pastures are getting quite dry, and the regular flies, so called, are plenty. Cattle and horses have to fight for their lives, almost. I do not see why our dumb beasts have to be so punished.

We have seen a flock of night hawks—a bird kind, this week. They arise high in the air, then take a downward turn and screech out boo. It is quite an interesting sight to sit and watch them. They travel by night, the first part.

GRAFTON.

School closed the 20th. Lucie Morse, teacher, gave entire satisfaction to both parents and pupils.

Mrs. Geo. Newton of Auburn, who has been here with her mother, Mrs. N. M. Brown, returned home Thursday.

Clarence Ferrin of Errol, N. H., is working for Gilbert Tyler and Charles Learned of Andover for Geo. Otis during haying.

Will Otis has sold his heavy work horses to M. D. Sturtevant of Magalloway and purchased another pair at Bell's stable, Berlin, N. H.

WEST STONEHAM.

Twelve Weeks of School.
School closed in this district last Friday, the 15th, after a very successful term of 12 weeks, taught by Flora Butters of West Stoneham. Miss Butters is experienced, and one of our best teachers and we hope to see her in our school again in the near future. Pupils not absent one-half day were Myrtle Adams, Margaret Culbert, Abbie Culbert, Hazel, Silas and Albert Keniston, Winnifred and Sarah McKen. Owing to sickness Beryl McKen missed two days.

H. B. McKen recently bought a horse of Fred Mosher of North Waterford.

Forrest McAllister and Fred Warren of East Stoneham are haying for H. B. McKen.

Earl McAllister, who works at South Paris, visited his mother, Mrs. Leonard Gammon, the past week.

Mrs. George Berryman and three children of Abington, Mass., are visiting at her brother's, J. C. Sawyer's.

The box supper given by the scholars at Will Culberts' last Friday evening was a success both socially and financially. The proceeds were $4.00, to be used for curtains and fixtures for the school house.

EAST WATERFORD.

Mark Tapley is suffering from a severe cold.

Mrs. George Stevens is reported decidedly better.

Irving Stanley has purchased a milk-white steed.

Elmer Haggett and family visited friends in this place, Sunday.

Rain is very much needed, but an occasional shower helps us out some.

Farmers are in the midst of haying with superb weather and as a rule, harvesting a heavy crop.

The old pavilion, formerly used for dances and public meetings, has been taken for a shooting gallery.

The extremely hot weather sends the corn along in spite of the dry weather, though it must be late, anyway.

Mrs. Wm. A. Emery had a very heavy crop of strawberries from small patches. The berries were of large size, and delicious flavor, a large portion of which are being canned for winter use.

NEWRY.

Mrs. A. H. Powers is visiting her sister at Sunday River.

L. M. Blanchard is at work for Joshua Howard, cutting hay.

Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Bisbee called at A. B. Frost's last Saturday.

Mrs. C. D. Bean and children visited at A. B. Frost's, last week.

Mrs. Lizzie Chapman and her children spent last Sunday at A. H. Powers'.

NORTH NORWAY.

Elderly and Smith are doing S. J. Caldwell's haying.

Mrs. Russell's niece, Miss Hall of Rumford, is visiting her.

We noticed F. Q. Elliott's flag floating in the breeze at his cottage on his farm here.

Lona Noble is helping at Holt Farm, Kate Towne at Maplecroft, Ada Hobbs at Blueberry Ridge.

Mrs. Asa Needham has taken her little daughter Bertha and gone to the seaside for the girl's health.

Mrs. Ira Moulton and daughter, Mrs. Ella Harriman visited relatives and old neighbors this way, last week.

Freeland Adams' mother came to care for the family while his housekeeper, Mrs. Foster, went to see a sick sister.

Rev. Mr. Rideout is to preach an illustrated sermon for the boys next Sabbath at the Center. Old and young should attend.
